Clinton Grove Cemetery
name of property
Macomb County, Michigan
county and State

The Clinton Grove Cemetery is located west of Mt. Clemens in Clinton Township on Cass Avenue between Groesbeck Highway and Little Road near the North Branch of the Clinton River. The cemetery sits on a very slight elevation at about six hundred feet above sea level. It is a forty-eight acre burial ground owned and operated by the Clinton Grove Cemetery Association. The property includes an office and chapel, public mausoleum, caretaker's house and over nineteen thousand graves. There are three family mausolea and one above-ground contemporary crypt among the in-ground burials. Clinton Grove had its beginnings in the nineteenth-century "rural" cemetery movement and made the transformation to a twentieth-century perpetual care memorial park; hence there are a wide variety of nineteenth- and early twentieth-century monuments, many of them notable examples of funerary art. Clinton Grove's grounds are beautifully landscaped with over 570 trees, many of them well over one hundred years old. In addition, there are memorial trees on individual plots.

Cemetery

Clinton Grove Cemetery is basically rectangular in shape, oriented on the north-south axis perpendicular to Cass Avenue. The oldest sections are north and west of the office and chapel near Cass Avenue. There have been six additions to the cemetery since its establishment with the most recent acquisition dating from 1991. The cemetery's memorial park setting is created by a planned system of curving roads combined with silver maples, Norway maples, basswoods, flowering white and pink crab apple trees and large spruce and oak trees, which dominate the grounds. The roads wind through the cemetery and appear to be largely based on their relationship to the original cemetery boundary and the acquisition that is adjacent to it. They appear to only slightly conform to the basic topography and are superimposed on the rigid plot layout.

Clinton Grove Cemetery contains over nineteen thousand graves, six thousand of which date from the nineteenth century. The cemetery plots are laid out in gridiron fashion with space for a walkway defining sections of plots. In addition, twelve hundred individuals are entombed in the public mausoleum. There are a wide variety of markers and monuments represented in the cemetery, most of which are of granite. Many marble upright markers are in the oldest sections of the cemetery, along with one table marker.

The majority of the markers are bevel without bases; the historic markers are predominately of gray granite, while the contemporary markers are of pearl gray and Missouri red granite. There are a variety of flat markers. The bronze markers in the veterans section are the most distinctive. Slant markers are also prevalent; most are of gray granite in the historical sections. The contemporary slant markers are of Wausau red granite. Further, there are a number of upright monuments, the majority of which are obelisks in gray and pearl gray granite and columns with urns in gray granite. There is also a Missouri red granite column with a draped urn, one cylindrical column in polished Missouri red granite, several poured cement tree trunks, and a concrete "stone" marker dedicated to the Moravian Mission to the Indians. There is a plethora of contemporary upright markers on bases, including rolls.

There are several exceptional monuments. The Ullrich plot has a very tall obelisk with German inscriptions and the Olde plot has a larger than life-size seated boy with his dog. Another plot contains a large globe or ball supported by a large pedestal on a base. One upright marker has a sun dial on top of its pedestal. There is one historical table marker with a new base of poured concrete. There are three private mausoleums all of gray granite and one crypt of gray St. Cloud granite with the inscriptions in the polished face. Finally, there are two benches, one historic, in gray granite, and the other contemporary and of Missouri red granite.

There is a large variety of grave offerings. They range from mylar balloons to halloween pumpkins, geese windsocks, wooden geese, statues of the Virgin Mary, penguins, wooden fish, stuffed animals and other children's toys in the children's section and concrete planters containing mums and spikes. Memorial trees include cedars and boxwood along with a large variety of annuals.

The graves are all oriented east-west in the Judeo-Christian tradition with markers at the head. Most of the inscriptions are on the eastern face of the marker.

Office and Chapel

At the entrance of the cemetery is the office and chapel constructed in 1914. The architect for this building was Theophilus Van Damme. It is a one and one-half-story cross gable, red brick Neo-Tudor building with half-timbering and stucco infill on the gable ends and under the gable above the front entry porch. The office is in that portion of the structure with the attic in the front gable. The chapel was in the other side and had vaulted ceilings; today it serves as the cemetery sales office. There is a slight overhang of the gable roof with plain vergeboards; the rest of the eaves has a wider overhang supported by brackets, which continue around the porte cochère as decorative rafters. The roof has very heavy asphalt shingling that gives the appearance of a slate roof. The porte cochère has a flat roof.

The front gable has a pair of casement windows in the front and rear facades of the attic. On the first floor there are three adjacent six-over-one double-hung sash windows. The chapel/sales office has a pair of segmental arch casement windows with imposts, which are duplicated on the north or rear facade of the structure. One has memorial stained glass windows. The arch begins with imposts and features a stonework sill. There are three contiguous windows separated by mullions under each arch. Battlements project up behind the gabled entry porch with stonework at the top. The stonework is used to punctuate the buttresses on the corners of the chapel and the buttress piers of the porte cochère. A non-contiguous beltcourse adds to the decorative effect of the stonework.

Mausoleum

The mausoleum is located in the southwestern corner of the cemetery just south of the veterans section. It is an imposing single-story structure with a parapet and a flat roof, built of limestone on a cut stone foundation. Below the parapet is an entablature with a series of vents in the frieze. The front facade of the mausoleum has two sets of coupled antae on either side of a central doorway. The door is paned with clear glass in a round arch with a keystone. The coupled antae treatment extends around the corners of the structure as well. There are three pairs of rectangular windows on either side of the mausoleum, all containing stained glass. The building was constructed in 1929. A 1950 addition increased its size by one-third by adding a rectangular section onto the rear facade.

The interior features a large center aisle that serves as the chapel and three side aisles extending on either side of the main aisle and terminating at the windows. Each side aisle contains banks of crypts. Four banks are reserved for marble niches for cremated remains. The crypts are stacked six high and all have marble faces.

Caretaker's House

The final structure in Clinton Grove Cemetery is the caretaker's house. The house was present in a historic photograph dated 1890, and appears to date from the mid- to late 1880s. The house is located in the southeast corner of the property facing south. It is a two-story, front gable and wing house with a jerkinhead roof and a porch inset in the "L" created by the wing. It sits on a concrete block foundation with brick walls in the basement. The structure is weatherboard-clad with an asphalt shingle roof. It has a steeply pitched roof with wide eave overhangs and decorative vergeboards with detailing in the Eastlake style. The porch has bevel-edge posts. There is a smaller porch on the rear facade located directly behind the front porch. The western facade features a square-plan bay window with arched segmental-arch treatment above each double-hung sash window. It has a slightly pitched roof with an eave overhang supported by decorative brackets. The rest of the windows, two-over-two double-hung sash, are set in rectangular wood frames with corner blocks.

A barn, now serving as a two-bay garage facing south behind the caretaker's house, was constructed c. 1915. It is weatherboard-clad with paneled doors that have four adjacent two-over-two transom lights. There is a small, windowless panel door along with three six-over-one double-hung sash windows on the west facade. There is a single window on the eastern facade that is also a six-over-one double-hung sash window.

The Clinton Grove Cemetery is a notable example of a Victorian-era cemetery, reflecting a system of planned roads and plots which demonstrate nineteenth- and early twentieth-century design principles. It clearly depicts its origins in the "rural" cemetery movement and its transformation to a perpetual care memorial park. The exquisite artistic quality of the funerary art, found in the vast quantity of family mausolea, handsome monuments and grave markers, all contribute to the sense of serene beauty in this place. The trees, bushes, shrubs and flowers marking many graves create a landscape design which adds to the beauty, peace and serenity of the park. Theophilus Van Damme's design for the office/chapel building lends an air of dignity to the formal design; the public mausoleum stands in stark contrast. The caretaker's house with its Eastlake styling is in keeping with the overall design. Clinton Grove Cemetery is the final resting place for many notable Mt. Clemens residents.

The Clinton Grove Cemetery Association was established as a non-sectarian, non-profit association on March 30, 1855. The original cemetery parcel was comprised of five acres; today it has grown to nearly fifty acres with the last parcel purchased in 1991. The association's meeting minutes indicate that the ten founding members -- Edward C. Gallup, George C. Fletcher, Benjamin Robertson, Thomas W. Snook, Orrin W. Delano, Prescott B. Thurston, George B. Van Eps, Ralph Sackett, John Tucker and Giles Hubbard -- at their initial meeting, agreed to select, purchase and govern a suitable piece of land to be used as a public cemetery. By April 24, 1855, the organization had settled on the present site as the desired location and paid Robert and Frances Welts five hundred dollars for the deed to five acres of land. The land is situated approximately one-half-mile west of the limits of Mount Clemens in Clinton Township, fronting on Mount Clemens-Romeo Plank Road, now Cass Avenue. By May 5, 1855, the association met and adopted the name of "Clinton Grove" and established the price of burial lots (Monfort 1892). The cemetery association is composed of lot owners with burial rights and is governed by a nine-member Board of Trustees.

According to a receipt on file in the association's files, the cemetery was surveyed and its plan laid out as of June 1, 1855, by Ludwig Wesolowski for the sum of twenty-seven dollars. Soon thereafter, many early settlers bought lots making the smaller Mount Clemens Village Cemetery obsolete. It is thought that there was no mass removal of graves from the old "burying ground" and family cemeteries; rather, families gradually moved the remains of their loved ones to Clinton Grove. As a consequence, there are monuments in Clinton Grove that predate its establishment (Monfort 1892). The oldest tombstone dates back to 1808.

The initial acquisition in 1855 was for five acres. Since that purchase, the cemetery has increased in size to nearly fifty acres. The first of several expansions occurred in 1877 when an additional seven acres were acquired from Mary Sackett. Later that same year, a total of ten acres were purchased in five-acre parcels from Edward G. and Sarah B. Tucker and the estate of Samuel Wood, respectively. Frank G. and Nellie E. Hacker deeded the association a total of fifteen acres in five- and ten- acre parcels in 1883, and it is on the five-acre parcel that the caretaker's house was constructed. George R. and Alice Ashcroft deeded seven acres, more or less, on March 31, 1914. The final parcel of six acres was deeded in 1991 by Kenneth and Virginia S. Stepnitz, all based on information from deeds kept in the Macomb County Registrar of Deeds Office. The cemetery currently comprises approximately fifty acres.

Clinton Grove Cemetery is the final resting place for many notable people who helped to shape the political, social, architectural, commercial, recreational and health/medicinal history of Mount Clemens. Former mayors, congressmen, attorneys, bankers, judges, ministers, doctors, business entrepreneurs, soldiers and sailors, entertainers, proprietors and workers from the great bathhouses and farmers are interred in the cemetery. There are veterans of the Revolutionary War, the War of 1812, the Mexican War, the Civil War, the Spanish-American War, World War I and II, the Korean War and the Vietnam War.

According to Michigan: A Guide to the Wolverine State, compiled by the Federal Writers' Project, Mount Clemens, called Michigan's spa, was well-known for its medicinal baths. It was "a city of bathhouses and hotels, with a strong, all-pervading, sulphurous odor. The medicinal properties of the water attract[ed] people from far and near." The mineral bath era began in 1873 and lasted until 1940. "The baths were designed to relieve if not cure such ailments as eczema, rheumatism, high blood pressure, neuritis, and psoriasis" (Worrell 1978:6). Treatments included high colonic irrigation, x-rays, infrared rays and massage. At the height of the bath era, "there were 10 bath houses and more than 40 hotels and boarding houses." (1978:9). Many well-known personalities went to Mount Clemens for the cure. "Included among the more famous guests at the Park were Henry Ford, George M. Cohan, Mae West, Booth Tarkington, Albert Cowles, and William Randolph Hearst" (1978:8). According to Mount Clemens: The Bath City of America, some of the most famous resorts included the Original Bath House, Medea Bath House, the Fountain Bath House, the Park Bath House, The Clementine Bath House, the Colonial Bath House, St. Joseph Sanitarium, the Plaza Bath House, the Olympia Bath House and the Baths of Arethusa. Interred in Clinton Grove Cemetery are the owners, operators and the major stockholders of these businesses.

Theophilus Van Damme, Mount Clemens' leading architect in the late-nineteenth- and early-twentieth centuries, the architect of the office and chapel building at the cemetery, was born in Belgium in 1867. He began practice as an architect in Mount Clemens in 1892. Among his major projects were his designs for the Park, Colonial and Medea Bath Houses, the St. Joseph Sanitarium, Clementine Bath House, Olympia Bath House, Mount Clemens High School and the Carnegie Library. In addition, he designed some of the finest commercial buildings in Mount Clemens. Van Damme was also the president of Mount Clemens Brick and Tile Company. He died in 1938 and is buried in Clinton Grove Cemetery.
